

Sidmouth Festive Break

For those of you that would like an early Festive Break that is quiet and peaceful, Sidmouth and the Bedford Hotel are the ideal combination. If you want to escape that pre-Christmas pandemonium and stress then this is the place to be. Elegant Sidmouth was in the 19th century one of the most select seaside resorts in Britain having gained royal patronage. Now the town is one of the most unspoilt resorts on the South Coast, steeped in an unhurried and traditional way of life that has become the watchword of this seaside town. The Esplanade with its dignified Regency buildings overlooks a sunny beach and the many shops have retained the personal service and friendliness one would expect from a country town.

Llandudno

Popular at any time of year, Llandudno is the model seaside resort, it is in a level position, everything is easily accessible and always gives the impression of being well kept and welcoming. Elegant hotels line the sweeping promenade and a graceful pier extends far into the sea. The limestone headland of the Great Orme rises abruptly from the western end of town its summit is best reached by the venerable vehicles of the Great Orme Tramway. From the top there are magnificent views along the rugged coastline of North Wales. The town has an excellent shopping centre so no need to worry about any forgotten presents and there will be plenty of Christmas festivities going on to get you in a mood to celebrate.
